and work on preserve and publish it to the required level? Do the concerned people contributed or contribute seriously and professionally in this field? Do we have the same mettle of our ancestors? Do we really know how much responsibility we have in this area? Are we at the level where we see our manuscript heritage plundering, burning and remaining silent without any reaction or stance that we can justify to future generations?

And so on of the questions that we think, they are logical. The conscious people of our Islamic society must answer them with all frankness and boldness, and that we should not remain ignorant and turn our faces from the facts and only getting live on the glories of the ancestors.

We ask Allah to help the sons of this blessed nation to follow in the footsteps of predecessors. (He) Excellent is the protector, and Excellent is the helper. Praise be to Allah, first and foremost, prayers and peace be upon who was sent with The clear Book, the Prophet Muhammad, our beloved Muhammad and his good and pure progeny.

biguity to those who read history, observe carefully and equitably the events and situations, which had passed through our Islamic nation during the past centuries that wreaked havoc in lands and people.

Their portions were not less than others, but often they were as long with their scientific products the target, to satisfy the ruling whim, or unjustly ignorant hatred, and so on. Yes, the faithful and sincere scholars were victims of ignorant minds, and dark hearts of rulers.

Despite what we mentioned and more, but Almighty Allah refused (anything) except to perfect His light. Allah has granted us those men in every time, who you see them have dedicated themselves to this difficult task for nothing except preserving our rich scientific heritage and publish it to the next generations. It is an extension of the divine mercy, so that the hearts will be guided, and the minds will be nourished. They will survive and upscale forgetting all the horrors that surround them. They have taken the earth as a mat and the moon as a lamp and devour the earth with light, and take the moon as a lamp. They satisfied with the plies as clothes, science as food and a fountain pen as a spring. May the mercy of Allah be upon them.

Consequently, we have got our manuscript heritage only by the efforts of them. Our nation would not be proud, of what they inherited from the scientific profound heritage, on the rest of the nations without them. Library shelves would not be filled with hundreds of thousands of manuscripts today without their sacrifices.

After all, can we ask ourselves and our contemporary generation, as we are sons of a nation that begot men whom the humanity is proud of them, what have we done to our manuscript heritage? And if we did something, would it be enough comparing to the past experiences, and what we have now? The number of centers and institutions concerned with the field of manuscript heritage (renovating, indexing and annotating), if it was counted by what we have of manuscripts, it would be shameful. Then do we really respect our manuscript heritage, and do we respect our manuscript heritage

Sincere Invitation

Editor-in-chief

Praise be to Allah, Lord of the Worlds, and prayers and peace be upon the noble prophets and messengers, our beloved Muhammad and his good and pure progeny.

It is no secret to everyone, the great effort done by our former scholars in the preservation and dissemination of various Islamic sciences throughout history, through what we have read in indexes and bibliographies. We have got some of the writings and classifications that covered the various fields of science and knowledge rather than what their blessed hands gave manuscripts of works of their predecessors, which were not to be survived, lived and reached us without them. That was their job and a most important thing which they are being inherited and they hand it over from one generation to another, through the past centuries. They were truly the trustees of the nation.

Islamic territories were not the only beneficiary of this profound scientific legacy. Though it was very hard, they have contributed actively to its dissemination all over the world. Their aim is the revival of man, who is a peer to them in creation, and building of an integrated society, so that it crosses the space of other nations, passing the oceans, seas and continents, so they have been benefited from it.

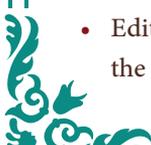

The cross-border cultural and intellectual movement have had a significant impact on attracting other peoples to know the true religion of Islam. The biography of great men must be read, benefited and considered. They lived in hard times and a difficult life, which appears clear without any am-
